

Landscape Research Group E-newsletter/E-bulletin

Notes for contributors

Background and objectives

Landscape Research Group has developed an e-bulletin to provide a dynamic, informal and inclusive platform for information, news, events and developments relating to landscape research, practice and experience. It complements our two other publications – Landscape Research (available on subscription only), and Landscape Research Extra (available in hard copy to our members and to anyone, via pdf download, from our website).

The target audience is very broad; i.e. anyone who is interested in landscape. Therefore we ask that all content is written in an informal style – i.e. for the layman.

The e-bulletin will be issued via email to LRG members and those who subscribe, via our website www.landscaperesearch.org. The frequency will be, hopefully, bi-monthly – with the first issue at end September 2015, the next end November 2015 and so on. The frequency may increase or decrease depending on the volume and variety of material, information and contributions that are forthcoming.

Sources of information

We would like to feature material from diverse and geographically widespread sources. We wish the e-bulletin to reflect the diverse and dynamic nature of landscape theory, practice and experience throughout the world. No one is excluded from contributing material or content as long as that material relates to landscape.

Types and scope of material

The list of headings overpage gives an idea as to the scope and types of material we hope the e-bulletin will cover. However, we are open to further suggestions and topics. The e-bulletin is not intended for longer essays or articles apart from in exceptional circumstances. For longer prose pieces – such as blogs, essays, reviews – we ask that they are no more than 500 words.

The language of the e-bulletin is English. Where an author wishes to include content in another language, an English translation must be supplied.

Editorial statement

The aim of the e-bulletin is to encourage debate, dialogue and to inform.

LRG e-Bulletin will not accept or publish any material that is defamatory, discriminatory or incites violence. Authors and contributors are expected to verify the accuracy of the information they provide and to ensure that the copyright status of images, artwork, quotes and any other material included in their contributions permits their further use/publication.

Proposed headings

- LRG News/announcements
- Quote of the newsletter
- Photo/Image of the newsletter
- Events
 - Forthcoming
 - Report from last event
- Calls for Conference papers/sessions/event proposals
- Latest from Project Hercules
- Latest developments in the field of landscape practice
- Latest developments in the field of landscape theory
- General blogspot
- Landscape News from our International Correspondents
- News from our Student Correspondent(s)
 - Events
 - Forthcoming conferences, workshops, training opportunities
 - Report from last event
 - General blogspot
- Reviews (books, landscape design, exhibitions, landscape-focused projects)
- LRJ – Editor’s recommendations
- LRE – Editor’s recommendations
- Job opportunities
- Research positions
- New publications
- Notes and subscription

Contact

The address to which contributions and queries should be sent is eBulletin@landscaperesearch.org